John Cornell, new president of The Camera Club of Laguna Woods Village, is a retired Newsday photographer, past-president of the National Press Photographers Assn., and a Pulitzer Prize winner.

Photographs such as these, taken by John Cornell, offer a camera-eye view of history. They are copyrighted by Newsday Inc. and sold by Getty Images.

At top, man with dog is at the New York City morgue – looking for his master after 911.

Kissing the fish was a year-long project about sea bass that started in the Hudson river and ended nine months later off the Outer Banks of North Carolina. The fisherman was in Port Jefferson, Long Island.

Seen from an amazing vantage point, President George W. Bush is sworn in.
